Paula qualified in 1998, joining Wedd Daniel Solicitors and rising from Assistant Solicitor to Partner. She opened her own firm which she ran for 14 years before deciding she wanted to return to a life of less business administration and more face to face work with clients. Paula has been representing clients at the Police Station for over twenty five years and has dealt with a wide variety of cases, including a recent high profile murder. She represent clients at the Magistrates Court and specialises in trial advocacy, including in dangerous dog cases. She is patient, thorough and a good listener, which enables her to guide clients smoothly through the criminal justice process.
